Re: AAUW statement for “Sexual Assault in the Military” briefing

Dear Commissioners:

On behalf of the 150,000 members and supporters of the American Association of University Women (AAUW), I am pleased to share AAUW’s perspective with the Commission’s “Sexual Assault in the Military” briefing. AAUW strongly supports “freedom from violence and fear of violence in homes, schools, workplaces, and communities.”¹

Since its founding in 1881, AAUW has been breaking through barriers for women and girls. We take a special interest in military and veteran issues because our executive director, Linda Hallman, is a proud nine-year veteran of the United States Army.

AAUW strongly supports efforts to protect the rights of military service members and end the scourge of sexual assault and violence. We believe this issue, which statistics indicate is endemic in the military, must be addressed in a prompt, comprehensive, and sustained manner. Recent surveys of female veterans have found that close to a third were victims of rape or assault while they were serving, which is double the rate of the civilian population.² According to the Pentagon, nearly 3,000 women were sexually assaulted in 2008, yet the Pentagon also estimates that “80% to 90% of sexual assaults go unreported.”³ New research by the Department of Veterans Affairs has found that this problem even worse in conflict zones, with half of the women sent to Iraq or Afghanistan reporting being sexually harassed, and nearly one in four reporting sexual harassment.⁴ Clearly, this is unacceptable and must change.

AAUW backs many initiatives to address the problem of sexual assault in the military. Among our efforts is the work of our member-supported Legal Advocacy Fund (LAF). The LAF has provided support to plaintiffs in lawsuits (Cioca v. Rumsfeld,⁵ Klay v. Panetta,⁶ and *Shaw v. Panetta*⁷) on behalf of service members who allege they were sexually assaulted or raped by other service members while serving their country. AAUW is committed to ensuring that these service members have their day in court, despite the Department of Defense’s opposition.

AAUW has worked to raise awareness about military sexual assault. We have teamed with the filmmakers of the Oscar-nominated documentary The Invisible War to arrange screenings for our 1,000 branches nationwide.⁸ Thousands of AAUW members, as well as their communities, have seen this important movie and engaged in discussions about sexual assault and violence in our nation’s military.

In addition, AAUW supports legislation to prevent sexual assault and punish those who commit sexual assault. We supported Senator Al Franken’s (D-MN) legislation to protect defense contractors from sexual assault,⁹ and we strongly support Representative Jackie Speier's Sexual Assault Training Oversight and Prevention Act (STOP Act). The STOP Act would fundamentally change how sexual assault is handled in the military. It would create an independent body to investigate and prosecute sexual assault cases. This would remove the inherent conflict of interest that exists in a "command and control" environment, where those in command have incentives to not pursue allegations. As Rep. Speier put it:

"The Defense Department estimates that there were 19,000 sexual assaults in 2010 and that the overwhelming majority of these assaults were never reported. The "why" of these unreported cases isn't answered by more training and statements of zero tolerance."¹⁰

Through accountability, education, and a robust prosecution system, we can end sexual assault in the military. Such protections are a long time coming, and they are the least we can do to support and respect the women and men around the world advancing this country's national interest and safety. Their civil rights are no less than anyone else's, and must be protected by every mean at our disposal.

Thank you for the opportunity to submit comments on this important issue. I look forward to working with you to protect civil rights in the military. If you have any questions, please feel free to contact me at 202-785-7720, or Beth Scott, regulatory affairs manager, at 202-728-7617.

Sincerely,

Lisa M. Maatz
