Dear Leader McConnell, Minority Leader Schumer, Speaker Ryan, and Minority Leader Pelosi:

The undersigned organizations are committed to improving the physical, mental, and financial health of young adults in this country. We are writing to strongly urge you that any legislation to repeal the Affordable Care Act (ACA) be accompanied by a detailed replacement plan that provides families with equal or improved access to high-quality, affordable health coverage. We are deeply concerned by reports that Congress will vote to repeal the ACA without a meaningful and simultaneous replacement. Young adults are already struggling to gain an economic foothold and start their financially independent lives, so any vote to destabilize our health care system would put the well-being and financial stability of young Americans at grave risk.

Repealing the ACA without a comparable and immediate replacement could cause 30 million people to lose health care coverage. Furthermore, efforts to repeal the ACA could jeopardize the health security young families gain through the Children’s Health Insurance Program (CHIP), which stands on the shoulders of Medicaid. More than one in five Millennial parents lives in poverty, the highest rate of young adult poverty in more than a quarter century. Uprooting the health security young families rely on would further imperil the financial standing of young families.

Since the passage of the ACA, more than 8 million young adults ages 18 to 34 have gained health coverage, including more than 3.8 million through the law’s Medicaid expansion; 2.3 million through the law’s dependent coverage provision; and millions more have purchased coverage through the health insurance marketplaces, where more than 7 in 10 consumers are eligible to receive financial assistance to purchase coverage. These coverage gains have brought the young adult uninsurance rate down from 29 percent in 2010 to 16 percent in 2015.

In addition to broader gains in health insurance enrollment, the ACA is providing young adults with higher quality coverage that better addresses their health needs and ensures their financial security. 8.7 million women, the majority of them Millennials, gained maternity coverage. Thanks to the ACA, mental health benefits, including substance use disorders, are covered as Essential Health Benefits, helping reduce the burden on the 7.6 million young adults who receive care for mental health conditions annually.

The law’s provision ensuring access to no out-of-pocket cost preventive care like annual physicals, immunizations, well-woman visits, and contraception is putting money back into the pockets of our cash-strapped generation. For example, an analysis from the IMS Institute on Healthcare Informatics found that in 2013, the year the ACA’s contraception coverage provision went into effect for most plans, women saved an average of $269 a year on birth control.

The ACA’s vital consumer protections are also making our health system more fair for young adults. Up to 30 million young adults can no longer be denied coverage or charged more for having a pre-existing condition. Furthermore, the law’s anti-discrimination provisions prohibit insurance companies from charging consumers more based on their gender identity, sexual orientation, or pregnancy status.

Before the ACA, young adults historically had some of the highest rates of uninsurance, which is why our organizations believe we must protect the gains they have made under the ACA. No young person should be made worse off by a vote to repeal that lacks a sufficient replacement, which experts say will lead to higher premiums and fewer benefits. Starting their careers on the heels of the Great Recession, young adults already face some of the country’s greatest financial headwinds. Any Congressional action on health policy must take these factors into account on behalf America’s young people.

Sincerely,
