Dear Chair and Ranking Members,

As you work towards a final spending agreement for fiscal year 2019, the undersigned organizations representing students, veterans, colleges, consumers, financial aid administrators, college access providers, scholarship providers, education advocates, civil rights advocates, and the business community, write to stress the critical value of the Pell Grant, and corresponding need to continue making the same key investments provided in the fiscal year 2018 Omnibus that retained all current Pell Grant funds in the Pell Grant program and increased the maximum grant.

We are grateful that the 2018 Omnibus protected all Pell Grant funds for use in the Pell Grant program, and are encouraged that the fiscal year 2019 education spending bill passed out of the House Appropriations Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and Related Agencies Subcommittee similarly protects all Pell Grant funding. Taking money away from Pell Grants would place key improvements, like ensuring the award amount at minimum keeps pace with inflation, further out of reach. It could also leave Pell Grants more vulnerable to future harmful cuts.

The 2018 Omnibus furthermore increased the maximum Pell Grant award by $175, a meaningful 3 percent increase that provided a critical one-time offset to the loss of the grant’s automatic annual inflation adjustment. This important investment prevented further decline in the grant’s purchasing power. However, the current maximum Pell Grant still covers just 28 percent of the cost of attending a four-year public college, and the House fiscal year 2019 education spending bill under consideration includes no increase in the current maximum grant.
Without continued annual investment, the real value of students’ Pell Grants will continue to decline, and data show that the 7.5 million students who rely on Pell to continue their education after high school already are more than twice as likely as others to borrow student loans, and graduate from college with an average of $4,500 more debt than their higher income peers. At a time when a postsecondary credential or degree is an increasingly necessary gateway to a meaningful career, a strong Pell Grant is critical to ensuring that students from all financial backgrounds are able to participate and grow a strong, diverse economy.

The increase in the caps provided in the recent two-year Congressional budget agreement provides an opportunity for a fair allocation that adequately supports all of the important programs in this appropriations bill, including Pell. We urge you to continue to prioritize the Pell Grant in the fiscal year 2019 education spending bill by maintaining all Pell Grant funds in the Pell Grant program and increasing the maximum award to at least keep pace with inflation.

Signed,
